ABSTRACT

A user is directed to information specific to an application on a network upon inputting a first number uniquely identifying the application on the network and, in some cases, a second number associated with the information.